

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO
FACULTY OF LAW

INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS PROGRAM

and

Professor Patrick Macklem

present:

Differential protection of the right to equal treatment for religious versus ethnic minorities: international legal perspectives

Kristin Henrard

Erasmus University of Rotterdam

October 29, 2012

12:30-2:00 p.m.

(lunch will be served)

University of Toronto, Faculty of Law

Falconer Hall, 78 Queen's Park

FLA

Kristin Henrard is professor at the Erasmus University of Rotterdam. She teaches human rights, minority protection, constitutional law, and introduction to public law. Her main publications pertain to human rights and minority protection, with a focus on educational rights, linguistic rights, the principle of equal treatment and the prohibition of discrimination, freedom of religion and accommodation of religious diversity, socio-economic and political participation. Kristin Henrard is editor of the Netherlands International Law Review, Global Review of Ethnopolitics, International Journal on Group and Minority Rights, and European Autonomy and Diversity Papers (EDAP). She is the co-editor of the Brill Series on Group and Minority Rights. She studied law at the Catholic University of Leuven, Belgium, and obtained an LLM from Harvard Law School. Between 1995 and 1999 she conducted doctoral research and took her doctorate at the Catholic University of Leuven.